SIGN UP

The initiative petitions for the Home Rule amendment and the Civil Service measure are to be circulated during the next two weeks by authorized persons to be sent out from the headquarters established in the Bennett Building. Eighteen thousand signatures are necessary to initiate a petition. For the Home Rule amendment 2,000 signatures have been secured in Grand Junction, 5,000 signatures in Pueblo and 2,500 or 3,000 have already been secured in this city. In order to contribute her share Colorado Springs should contribute at least 2,000 more. Denver is expected to furnish the balance necessary to initiate.

The Civil Service measure was drawn by prominent Denver attorneys affiliated with the Civil Service League of this state. It is endorsed by that League and also by the Federated Women's Clubs and the Direct Legislation League.

Both the Home Rule amendment and the Civil Service measure are on file for signatures in the store building on the first floor of the Bennett Building, on Tejon Street, just south of Pike's Peak Avenue. Both of these measures have received the strongest endorsements.

The Home Rule amendment should receive the signature of every voter in this city who desires to keep Colorado Springs clear from expensive and confusing litigation. Therefore, sign up!

THE IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT AT CHICAGO

IN A recent article in The Independent on "The New Irrepressible Conflict," Delos F. Wilcox comes to a conclusion that is difficult, if not impossible, to escape. With the situation as it exists in the South, he says, "it is hard to see how the Democratic party can be of much use as a dominant organization in national politics. The Progressives must either capture the Republican party or else organize a new one. . . . A realignment of parties is inevitable, in order that the progressive movement may not end in talk."

Political thinkers everywhere realize that the present political situation is an unusual one. Everyone knows that the labels "Republican" and "Democrat" are no longer descriptive terms. They do not indicate the nature of a man's political opinions. Such a condition of things cannot last. It is unreasonable and unfortunate.

There are real issues at stake in the presidential campaign of this year. As Mr. Wilcox says, "The personalities of the campaign have their origin in the furious denunciation by the reactionary press and the reactionary political leaders who are 'scared out of their boots' by the strength and significance of the progressive movement, and who know that their only hope of heading it off is in reviling its leaders and averting popular attention from the fundamental issues to their personal foibles."

The attempt of the reactionaries to divert the peoples' attention from real to false issues has not succeeded. The issue in Chicago this morning is clear-cut, definite, unmistakable. The Chicago Convention is expected to take decisive action. Expectations will be fulfilled.

QUSTED FOR HERESY

ONE does not need to be a member of a religious sect and have opinions inconsistent with the creed of that sect in order to be a heretic. At any rate, not in Colorado Springs. One merely needs to be a member of the local branch of the Socialist party and take part in a reform movement originating outside of said branch.

The organizer, the chief executive officer of the Socialists of Colorado Springs, was also secretary of the Direct Legislation League. At the last meeting of the Socialists he was subjected to the modern descendant of the Spanish inquisition, which is operated to subdue independent members. A resolution was introduced declaring the Direct Legislation League to be a "political organization." Be it remarked that, according to the national constitution of the Socialist party, no one can be a member of that party who has not "severed his connection with all other political parties" or who occupies "a position, honorary or remunerative by gift of any party other than the Socialist party." The local Socialists passed the resolution. This was a thumbs-down vote for their organizer. He was ousted for heretical affiliations.

When any one joins the Socialist party he is required to subscribe to this: "PLAY BY THEMSELVES" a creed. The creed is this:

I, the undersigned, recognizing the class struggle between the capitalist class and the working class and the necessity of the working class constituting themselves into a political party distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the capitalist class, hereby declare that I have severed my relations with all other parties, that I endorse the platform and constitution of the Socialist party, including the principle of political action, and hereby apply for admission to said party.

Notice that a member of the Socialist party promises that he has "severed relations with all other parties." The issue in the local trial for heresy was this: Is the Direct Legislation League a political party? The state secretary of the Socialists says: "As I understand the purpose of the Direct Legislation League, it does not constitute a political party under the definition of our state constitution." It is probable, therefore, that the local heretic can establish his orthodoxy before the state and national organizations.

Probably the action by the Colorado Springs local resulted from the fact that the Headless Ballot is one of the measures being initiated by the Direct Legislation League. Socialists are opposed to that measure because it aims to secure the election of government officials for non-partisan reasons. At the last session of the Wisconsin Legislature the Socialists were successful in defeating a similar non-partisan measure.

The tendencies shown by the Socialists to oppose the introduction of the commission form of government in cities and the choice of state officers on the basis of state issues alone are dangerous ones; they are contrary to the most promising movement in politics.

The local Socialists may find, as others have found, that the question of heresy is a delicate one with which to deal. A person unjustly convicted of heresy, such as the Colorado Springs organizer appears to be, usually suffers less than the body that makes the conviction. Intolerance is a boomerang.

FROM OTHER PENS

THE DIFFERENCE.

From the Kansas City Times.

In every case reported from the national committee in Chicago the Roosevelt men have voted to seat the Taft delegates where the Taft men had a just claim to seats in the convention.

On the other hand the Taft men on the committee vote every time for the Taft delegates. The showing of a just claim on the part of Roosevelt delegates, as in the case of the Ninth Alabama district, does not change the vote of the 38 Taft committee men.

The difference is just this: 'Colonel' Roosevelt does not want a vote he is not entitled to. The Taft men are trying to get the votes whether they are entitled to them or not.

VOTELESS VOTERS.

From the Kansas City Star.

On the Republican national committee are 53 men. With one for each of the 48 states, why is there a total of 53? Because Porto Rico, the Philippines, Alaska, Hawaii and the District of Columbia each have a national committeeman. Each of these administrative dependencies has equal representation, too, on the credential committee for seating delegates, with the big Republican states of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Kansas, New York and the others.

And yet none of these five "possession" has any part in the presidential election, and not one has a single vote in the electoral college.

O the many things that are wrong with the existing national convention system this is certainly one.

ON A POWDER KEG.

From the Kansas City Star.

With the whole country looking on, and with about half the people at the fever pitch of indignation, the bluff of the national committee to unsent the Roosevelt delegates by "bomb proof" fraud is not at all likely to be carried through. But what the whole country looking on sees is that a majority of a mere party committee (holding over from appointments four years earlier) can commit that fraud if they have both the evil design and the hardihood to act on the design.

That possible fact—that actual condition of potential robbery—is a complete denial of popular rule. That 53 men, or any other small minority group, could vote the expressed will of a vast majority of the people of every section of the country is an enormity in any scheme of free government.

Such a direct denial of popular rule cannot last. Its end is reached right here and now with the Chicago convention. The fight of the people under Roosevelt's leadership has been against that very thing. The "tyranny of minorities" is shown in its most indefensible extreme in what a machine committee now proposes.

And the people have won that fight. If the remnants of the old guard, in its place of accidental authority, wants to know the full extent of the Roosevelt victory with the people it will continue to play with the powder it is fooling with now.

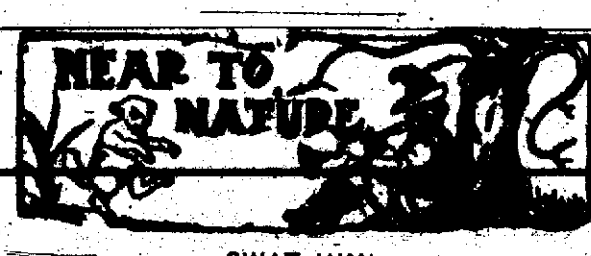

WILBUR WRIGHT.

From Harper's Weekly.

Sincere and general is the public grief for the untimely death of Wilbur Wright, the first man to fly in an aeroplane. He did it credit both as an inventor and a man. Well described as an Ohio Yankee, he was American all over; in a simple and unassuming self-possession and self-control; with patience, persistence and great intelligence; he and his brother worked out a great problem. Man-flight had been for generations associated with visionary minds. People dreamed about it and remembered Lucius Green. But Langley and Bell were not visionaries, except in the sense of having vision, not was the Wrights, the second generation, a talent for mechanical genius and of a mother with these petriotic-minded men kept their heads and used them. They did not sell out their own waist for their chance, which came in the form of a discerning capitalist, and when it came, improved it with the same controlled sagacity that had earned it.

Wilbur Wright had made some money and a great reputation. We all wish he had lived to enjoy both in far fuller measure, and to employ himself for another 20 years in the development of the art of flying. He was the best man in the world, and one of the most high-minded, and most devoted to the advancement of science.

Giving Things a Rest

By RUTH CAMERON.

To last as long as possible and remain in the most efficient state, human beings must have a certain amount of rest and change. That is a truism. But did it ever occur to you that inanimate objects also seem to profit by an occasional rest?

A few months ago, a clock which we had had a great many years, suddenly stopped in the middle of the week, and firmly resisted all efforts to start it.

"It needs cleaning," we said. "We must send it to the clockmaker." We were very busy, however, and put off attending to this matter until next week. At that time we were about to call up the clockmaker and ask him to come for the recalcitrant timepiece, when someone suggested, "Let's try to start it once more before we send it away." We did so, and the clock started cheerfully off on its duties of timekeeping without a murmur or a hitch. All it needed, you see, was a rest.

Everyone knows that boots and shoes wear out ever just about twice as long if they are not worn steadily, but given a chance to rest a day or two every now and then, and many people say the same about clothes.

At the end of last summer, the hat which I had worn all the season seemed absolutely impossible to come, and I bought my winter hat considerably earlier than I had intended to, because it did not seem to me that I could wear my faded and dilapidated summer hat even once more. But behold, when I took that hat out of the box after a winter's rest, it didn't look half bad, and I actually wore it a few times.

A woman who keeps two or three expensive plumes as permanent hat ornaments, declares that she is able to get a good deal more wear out of them, if she gives them a season's rest now and then. "If I used them steadily every season, they would only last three or four years," she says, "but by giving them a summer or a winter vacation now and then, I can keep them presentable for eight or nine years."

Perhaps someone will suggest in the case of the hat that the change was subjective rather than objective; in other words, that it was my eyes which profited by the rest rather than the hat. There may be something in that, but that hypothesis doesn't explain the clock, you know, nor the plumes, nor the shoes.

There have been philosophers who contended that there is a principle of life in every inanimate object. I can't quite see that yet, but I do still believe that however you explain it, in this matter, inanimate objects are just like you and me—they sometimes need a rest.

TEN MILLION NEGROES

Colored Population More Than Twice as Large as in 1880.

From the New York Sun.

When the census figures of 1900 were published they revealed the fact that in the 40 years since slavery the negro population had doubled. It was 4,441,830 in 1860 and 8,833,994 in 1900.

Now that we are beginning to get returns from the 1910 census, writes Booker T. Washington in the Independent, we learn that during the last 10 years the race has added almost another million (994,390) to its stature.

According to the thirteenth census the negro population was 8,833,994, and it has increased at the same rate since 1910 that it did before, namely 11.30 per cent for the decade, or about 100,000 a year, it is now considerably more than 10,000,000.

The importance of this fact is that it assures the physical existence of the race. The negro is not dying out. The rate of increase among negroes is not as great as it was some years ago, but that in true of every civilized country in the world in which the population is not increased by immigration.

The census of 1911 shows, for example, that the rate of increase for the English people, measured by the excess of births over deaths, is 12.4 per cent. The natural rate of increase of the white population, excluding increase by immigration, was estimated at 20 per cent in the period 1880 to 1890, and is not quite 15 per cent for the period from 1900 to 1910.

The census shows that the white population is increasing more rapidly than the negro in the southern states. This is due in part to the fact that while there is a movement in the black population northward from the border states like Kentucky, Tennessee and Maryland, there is at the same time a movement of the white population southward, particularly in the direction of Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

The statistics show, for example, that while the negro population has actually decreased in the border states mentioned, and the increase in Virginia and Delaware was no more than 1.6 per cent, the increase of the negro population in the northern states was 18.4 per cent.

This does not mean, as some persons have said, that the negro population is shifting from the southern to the northern states. The fact is that the total increase of negro population in the north during the decade from 1900 to 1910 amounted to no more than 18,870. During the same period negro population in the south has grown from 7,922,959 to 8,743,880, an increase of 821,421. As a matter of fact, the increase in the north over the south has been no more than one-half of one per cent of the whole negro population.

The truth is, that negro emigration from the border states has not been directed exclusively toward the north. On the contrary, there has been, perhaps, an even larger movement of the negro population south and west. For example, in Arkansas, Oklahoma and West Virginia the negro population has not only increased in numbers more rapidly than in most other southern states, but this increase had been more rapid than that of the white population in the same states.

In Oklahoma the white population increased 145.5 per cent, from 1890 to 1910. In the same period the negro population increased 147.1 per cent. In West Virginia, the percentage of increase for whites was 26.4 per cent; for negroes 47.8 per cent. In Arkansas the percentage of increase for whites was 19 per cent; for negroes, 26.7. In Florida, where there has been a large immigration from the north during the past decade, the negro population increased less rapidly than the white.

In spite of this fact, the percentage of increase was 33.8, showing that there has been a very considerable negro immigration into Florida from other parts of the south. The average increase of negro population in the southwestern states—Kansas, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma—has been 17.1 per cent.

Another striking fact which the census figures have disclosed is that in the readjustment which is now taking place in the south between the city and the rural population the negro on the whole remains in the country, while the white man goes to town.

A LOFTY WIRELESS TOWER

From an Exchange.

The height of the tower at the wireless telegraph station at Nauen, near Berlin, Germany, has recently been doubted. It is now 568 feet high. Only one other wireless station—that on the Eiffel tower in Paris—is higher. The tower that forms the original tower at Nauen is made of slender iron rods, and is 225 feet in length. It is secured at the base by a ball-and-socket joint, and is held in a vertical position by three steel cables that permit the tower to swing freely in the wind. A second mast of the same length has been placed upon the original one. This, also, is held in place by cables. The increased height of the tower will enable the station to send messages nearly 4,000 miles.

JAPANESE PROVERBS

From the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Our "Dimple, not the day of small things" is more picturesquely phrased by the Japanese, who convey the same meaning in the "Famous words are made of iron scrapings."

Our commonplace, "Out of evil good may come," finds with them an expressive simile in "The lotus springs from the mud," and, in point of pugnacity, our "Adding insult to injury" is vastly inferior to their "Rubbing salt on a sore."

There is a strong pessimistic strain in such proverbs as "Better nourish a dog than an unfaithful servant," "Catch a thief and find he is your own son."

A very low appreciation of the pleasures likely to fall to any man's share in this world is indicated in "If you hate a man, let him live."

The Japanese have some really fine sayings worthy of universal acceptance, such as "Thine own heart makes the world," or "The poet at home sees the entire universe," or "The throne of the gods is on the brows of the righteous man."

Their nice observance of manners is evidenced by sayings such as "Excess of politeness becomes impoliteness."

Cleanliness and durability are claimed for a new chicken coop that is stamped out of sheet metal.

One of these superb "Ruskin Proofs," properly framed, would make an ideal wedding present.

THE HASKIN LETTER

NATIONAL CONVENTIONS. XXI—SINCE 1896

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Each of the two principal political parties has held three national conventions since 1896—the six calmest and most uneventful conventions in our history. During all that time the Republican party has been absolutely dominant in national affairs and the Democrats have had nothing to encourage them but that hope that springs eternal in the breast of every follower of Jefferson.

During the political period covered by the three presidential campaigns of 1896, 1904 and 1908, no radical change in the constitution of either party took place; there was no division of opinion that served to divide, by convention along well marked lines; and there was in both parties a manifest disposition on the part of the voters to submit unquestioningly to the decision of the regular party authorities in all matters. It is true that a marked schism took place in the Republican ranks, succeeded by a similar, even if less noisy, division in Democratic ranks, directly after the last presidential campaign; but it is left for the national conventions this week at Chicago and next week at Baltimore to determine whether conservative or progressive thought shall control in the respective organizations.

In no one of the six national conventions of the big parties held during this period has there been any change in the organic law controlling party organization. The three Democratic conventions without a word of debate accepted and affirmed the two-thirds rule and the unit rule that are the distinguishing characteristics of Democratic conventions; and no voice was raised to suggest any change in the scheme of apportionment except with respect to the Philippines. Adopting a policy consistent with their anti-imperialist views, the Democrats at Kansas City in 1900, refused to admit delegates from the Philippine Islands, although Filipinos had been admitted to the Republican convention at Philadelphia a few weeks before. The Democrats have adhered to this policy, although the Democratic national committee, meeting last January, included Philippine representation in the call for the national convention of 1912. Therefore, Filipinos will be present at a Democratic convention for the first time at Baltimore next week.

Sentiment in Favor of Change.

In every Republican convention since that of 1884, there has been a sentiment in favor of a radical change in the apportionment of delegates. Since 1884 the national conventions of both parties have been made up of twice as many delegates as each state has electors in the electoral college. This gives the Democratic state of Mississippi, where there are almost no Republicans, exactly the same strength in the national convention as Kansas, which is almost always certainly Republican.

In Democratic conventions since 1832, the state has been universally recognized as the unit—modeling the party constitution exactly upon the constitutional plan for the election of a president, with the exception that two-thirds is required to nominate, whereas only a majority of the presidential electors choose a president. The unit rule, by which all of the delegates from a state vote the entire voting strength of the state in accordance with the desire of a majority of the delegates from that state, or in compliance with the instructions of the state convention or primary that appointed the delegates, therefore, has been a feature of every Democratic convention.

In the Republican conventions the congressional district and not the state has been the unit, and, therefore, the state unit rule has not been applied. This system was at first merely a result of common consent, but after the unit rule had been definitely rejected by the national conventions of 1876 and 1880, provision for election of delegates by districts rather than by state was explicitly made by the convention of 1884, the first in which Mr. Roosevelt was a factor. In that same convention of 1884, it was proposed to have the apportionment of delegates on Republican vote cast and not upon the number of electors. This movement has been revived at every Republican convention since that time and four years ago the convention that nominated Mr. Taft rejected the new scheme, as proposed by Senator Bourne of Oregon, by a margin of only 36 votes.

May Be Last Delegated Convention.

Since the last national conventions were held a strong movement for the election and instruction of delegates in primaries has sprung up in all parts of the country and the rapid growth of this idea has led many observers to predict that the national conventions of 1912, meeting this week and next week, will be the last delegated national political party conventions ever held in the United States.

In 1900, the Republicans met at Philadelphia on June 23. They nominated William McKinley for president and Theodore Roosevelt for vice president by a unanimous vote. Mr. Roosevelt, who was a delegate from New York, cast the only dissenting vote, not voting for himself, indeed, for as Mr. Roosevelt refused to accept the vice presidency, which was popularly regarded as a mausoleum in which Senator T. C. Platt desired to entomb the crushed and mutilated ambition of the then governor of New York. No one then could foresee McKinley's tragic death, no one then would have believed that in 1912 Roosevelt would be a formidable candidate for a third presidential term.

The Democrats met at Kansas City on July 6. There was but one voice in the convention and that voice was for Bryan. Even David B. Hill, who had stood out until the last in the Chicago convention of 1896, came to Kansas City to urge the nomination of the "peerless leader." Only three times have the Democrats nominated a candidate by acclamation—Van Buren in 1840, Cleveland in 1888 and Bryan in 1900.

Four years later the Republicans met at Chicago on June 23. If there was any opposition to Theodore Roosevelt, it was too timid to voice itself in that assemblage. Mr. Roosevelt was nominated by acclamation, an honor accorded but to two other Republicans—Grant and McKinley.

Bryan Was Darling of Meeting.

The Democrats met in St. Louis on July 7. Mr. Bryan was not a candidate, but he was a delegate and although defeated in every vote taken in the convention, he was its hero and its darling and he went out of it a bigger man in his party than he was when he went in.

Alton B. Parker was nominated on the first ballot, receiving 658 votes to 204 for William Randolph Hearst, the balance of the thousand delegates scattering their votes among 10 other favorites. Although Mr. Bryan had waged a great fight in the convention on the contested delegations from Illinois, it was not until after Parker was nominated that the convention became excited. The candidate sent a telegram declaring that he construed the platform that had been adopted not to interfere with his own convictions in favor of the maintenance of the gold standard. That telegram threw the convention into a fury of anger and although the stormy night session that followed did not result in the repeal of Parker's nomination, it contributed materially to his defeat in November.

Four years ago, in 1908, the Republicans met at Chicago on June 16. William Howard Taft, the choice of President Roosevelt's "trust-busting" administration, was nominated on the first ballot, receiving 702 votes. The allies, as the "old guard" opponents were known, made a small showing of strength. Philander C. Knox got 66 votes, Charles E. Hughes 67, Joseph G. Cannon 58, Charles W. Fairbanks 40 and Joseph B. Foraker 16. There were also 25 votes for Robert M. La Follette and 8 for Theodore Roosevelt.

This brings the stories of the great national conventions of the American political parties up to the present moment. History is now in the making at Chicago and Baltimore.

Demand for This Preparation Is Growing Very Fast.

L. G. Johnson, of 129 E. Bijou Street, has told us that "Tona Vita" is a new tonic that is making such a record in Colorado Springs at present. "I have been in a miserable condition of health for several years. I never did know exactly what was the matter with me. I got no enjoyment from anything and could not eat or sleep or properly attend to my affairs. I had a severe case of stomach trouble and was very nervous. I thought I was going to die. After using the new tonic, 'Tona Vita', a short time, I have gained about five pounds. The first thing I noticed I began to sleep better and did not lose all night as formerly. Then my appetite began to improve and my blood did not distress me. I have grown steadily stronger each day and now I feel much like the same person. I have tried much medicine in the past, but nothing has helped. The first time I had made me into a weak man when I had about given up hope. The specialists who are introducing a new tonic in Colorado Springs say at several thousand people are now taking the tonic in this city. 'We are selling 'Tona Vita' to a great many people here,' said one of the specialists recently, 'but when you think that this city has hundreds of ill-sick people who would be immediately benefited by the tonic it does not seem as if we are accomplishing much as we should. However, the demand is growing larger very fast as people who are taking the tonic tell their friends what it has done, and it does more than anything else to make people realize what a really wonderful preparation 'Tona Vita' is. 'We will continue to meet callers at a Robinson Drug Company from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m., as long as we remain in Colorado Springs. If the tonic does not do all we claim for it the purchase price is refunded. 'Many people seem to be amazed at the remarkable records which are being made by the new remedy. Many cases of nervousness, stomach trouble and general breakdown of from ten to twenty-five years' standing are reported to have been relieved in a very short time.'

Colorado City DEPARTMENT

Colorado City to Vote on Charter Question July 23

Colorado City will vote on the charter form of government at a special election July 23, with the alternative of dividing the city into two wards and retaining the present form of government, as a result of action of the city council last night. The city at present has four wards, and it is thought that by dividing the city into two wards of two councilmen each, and doing away with four aldermen, the expenses could be materially lessened. This is a counter move against the charter sympathizers. The petition presented last night to the council, asking that the election be held, has 546 signers. The proprietors of a local shooting gallery addressed the council asking that they be allowed to keep their place open until midnight on week days and holidays, instead of being forced to close at 11 p. m. They declared that they want the same hours as saloons and billiard halls. The request was granted and the city attorney instructed to amend the ordinance. A request for a two-block sewer extension was not acted upon, but the city engineer was ordered to report on the survey for same at next meeting. The matter of sidewalks was brought up, and a crossing ordered laid at Tenth street and Colorado avenue. It was reported to the council that a large amount of cement walk is wearing out and should be replaced. No action was taken. Louis Feldman, a junk dealer, was summoned before the council to explain why he had not paid his junk dealer's license. He explained that he had asked for a reduction of license fee, and complained that nonresident junk peddlers paying $25 license with $200 bond are allowed to ply their trade in this city, while he, a resident taxpayer, was forced to pay $50 license and give $1,000 bond, besides having to keep books. The city attorney was instructed to draw up an amendment to the ordinance making the nonresident dealer pay the same license and fulfill the other requirements asked of residents. The amendment will be passed upon at the next meeting. A large number of bills were read and approved.

ALUNITE IN UTAH

ash-Bearing Mineral Described in Report Reissued by United States Geological Survey
Continued interest in American potash discoveries has necessitated the reprinting of practically all the recent government publications on the subject. The United States geological survey has just reissued Bulletin 511. Hoyt S. Gale, on alunite, a potash-bearing mineral found in a newly discovered deposit near Marysville, Utah. Special interest attaches to alunite, as the potash which it carries is believed to be commercially soluble. It is, it can be reduced to fertilizing material, for instance, by a simple process of roasting and leaching the alkali. The bulletin describes a vein which is believed to be of considerable size and although it can by no means supply the American demand for potash it may meet local needs. The commercial development of this deposit will be of greatest importance in stimulating exploration for other similar deposits. Alunite has been observed by other members of a geological survey at several points in a number of western states and it is therefore expected that further prospecting and investigation will disclose deposits that may yield a large quantity of Bulletin 511 may be obtained free on application to the director of the geological survey, Washington, D. C.

MOUNTAIN INTO A RIVER

Gigantic Earth Slide Near Sulphur Springs Ties Up Traffic on Moffat Road

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo., June 17.—A freight wreck early yesterday morning on the Moffat road five miles east of Sulphur Springs remained unexplained until last night, when it was discovered that a whole mountain had moved 20 feet and is sliding into the Grand river.
Last night a mountain of earth, 500 feet in length and 200 feet in height, engulfed the freight train which was wrecked. All freight traffic has been discontinued, while work trains on each side of the slide, with hundreds of men, ties and rails, are being held to put down a new track across the slip as quick as it stops moving.
With passenger trains on both sides of the wreck and slide, transfers were made yesterday and today, so that passenger traffic got through with but a few hours' delay.
Today, it is the intention to run only excursion trains between Denver and Fraser, while the big excursion of 200 people from the druggists' convention here, which is to go out of Denver Tuesday, will be transferred. All of the road officials are on the ground, but realize that the line cannot be repaired until after the mountain ceases to slide, which may be several days yet.
After a temporary track is built, it will require several weeks with steam shovels to remove the slide and uncover the cars. The freight that was wrecked was made up of fast freight and five cars of livestock belonging to Claxton and Munson of Denver.
No one was injured, and the stock cars remain on the rails. It is the belief of officials that the mountain had begun to move when the wreck occurred, so that when the train started to pass over that part of the track, the engine was forced off the rails.

ROOT DECLARES WELFARE OF PARTY COMES FIRST

CHICAGO, June 17.—Senator Root arrived yesterday and set himself immediately to the task of getting in touch with the situation, expressed the hope, if not the belief, that the fight which is being waged between the two candidates would not end in the destruction of the Republican party as an agency of government.
"The situation is simply this," he said, after he had conferred with various leaders. "Taft has an abundant majority to be nominated. The only question is whether they will stick. They are making desperate efforts to pull them away. But that sort of thing will work both ways. If any of the delegates violate their instructions there are others who will certainly go over to Taft."
"It is purely an impersonal matter with me. The welfare of the party is more important to me than the fortunes of either of these candidates. I am very fond of both Roosevelt and President Taft. I have known Roosevelt the longer, but their scrap is comparatively unimportant."
"I consider the Republican party a great agency for good government. What concerns me is the possibility of destroying it as an agency. Its removal as an instrument of government leaves only confusion. I don't want to see any large agency of government broken up, not even the Democratic party. The only way for the Roosevelt people to make themselves regular is to get a majority in the convention."

WAR STARTED SUNDAY PAPERS

Anxiety to Learn News Prompted Long Standing Prejudice in '61
From the "Battle of Principles," in the Kansas City Times.
The power and value of the newspaper of today is explained, in no small measure, by the battles of the Civil war. Out of these tumultuous conditions the Sunday newspaper was born.
Before the battle of Bull Run, the citizens of New York and Chicago frowned at the thought of a Sunday newspaper. As in London and Edinburgh today, they would not sanction it. But when there were a million men

A Dainty, Delicious Delight

Shredded Wheat Biscuit and Strawberries

Being made in Biscuit form it is so easy to prepare a delicious, wholesome meal with Shredded Wheat and berries or other fruits. The porous shreds of the Biscuit take up the fruit acids, neutralizing them and presenting them to the palate in all the richness of their natural flavor. Heat the Biscuit in the oven to restore crispness; then cover with strawberries or other fruits and serve with milk or cream, adding sugar to suit the taste. More nutritious and more wholesome than ordinary "short-cake" and so much easier to prepare requires no baking and no cooking.

Shredded Wheat is made of the whole wheat steamed-cooked, shredded and baked in the form of a p. golden brown Biscuits, ready to serve with milk or cream or fresh fruits.

in "armies" and "the whole nation trembled with the thunder of cannon, anxious parents, fearful wives, knowing that the battle was on, could not wait until Monday morning for news from the front.
But if the war did much for the press, newspaper men did much for liberty. To supply the people of the country with news from the field, a veritable army of war correspondents was organized, a telegraphic system built up that resulted in the development of the Associated Press.
This telegraphic service became a vast and shining web, with wires that trembled day and night, flashing despair and hope to innumerable hearts. Liberty owes a great deal to the press. For it assembled all the people in one vast speaking chamber, and told them how events were going with the slave and the Union.

IS VETOED BY PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The president today vetoed the army appropriation bill. He returned the bill to congress with a message indicating his disapproval of the legislative provision which would oust Major General Leonard Wood from the office of chief of staff on March 4 next.

The President's flat declaration that he was opposed to the enactment of legislation as a rider on an appropriation bill was taken today as an indication that he would also veto the legislative, judicial and executive bill which carries an amendment that would abolish the commerce court.

Chairman Hay of the house military affairs committee issued a statement in which he expressed the regret of misstating the facts and resorting to disingenuous arguments.

In his message the president said: "The army of the United States is far too vital an institution to the people of this country to be made the victim of hasty or imperfect theories of legislation. As was pointed out by chairman of the senate military committee, it is well known that the war college and the general staff have been for many months engaged upon a comprehensive plan of army reorganization."

At the present time, therefore, it is especially inappropriate, in my opinion, to force upon the statute books legislation enacted without the usual deliberation and care. I cannot conscientiously surrender the responsibility in shaping such laws with which I am vested under the constitution. "I therefore return to your honorable body without my approval."

Former Lady in Waiting to Empress Dies in Want

EL PASO, Tex., June 17.—Mrs. Clea Montes Munoz, formerly lady-in-waiting to the Empress Carlotta, wife of the ill-fated Maximilian, was buried in this city today, she having died from the infirmities of old age and in abject poverty and want. Her body was borne from the humble cot on which she died in a dilapidated shack to its final resting place, and it develops that during the last three months of her illness she was absolutely without medical attention. Mrs. Munoz came from France to Mexico in 1864 and had been a resident of this city for a number of years.

REQUEST LAW REQUIRING A LABEL ON GARBAGE-FED PORK

DENVER, June 17.—The state board of health has written a letter to Mayor Arnold and the city council, requesting the enactment of an ordinance requiring all garbage-fed pork sold in Denver to be labeled as such. It is suggested that the meat inspectors be required to place proper labels upon the meat, if they are not placed there by the dealers.
The former administration, shortly before retiring from office, entered into a contract with the Denver Hog Growers' association, to take all the city garbage for four years. The contract requires that the garbage be sterilized before it is fed. Dr. Sherman Williams, president of the board, and other members, demanded that no such contract be signed.
